

Protecting and Enhancing Human Health

Biomedical Research | Public and Mental Health | Portfolio Management

Whether it is military medical research to sustain and enhance warfighter health or supporting the Federal Government's response to the SARS-CoV-2 pandemic, our team of health science professionals serve the nation's highest medical research needs by administering, managing, and supporting preeminent scientific and public health programs. Our subject matter experts bring their diverse expertise from industry, academia, and the federal/civilian sector to provide basic research, scientific investigation, portfolio management, public health surveillance and prophylactic strategies.

Biomedical Research Portfolio Management:

Federal scientific and medical research programs have unique requirements. Our science and technical professionals work with our financial and program managers to prioritize, plan, resource, and evaluate research programs to maximize return on investment and:

- Manage biomedical research awards programs ensuring technical merit and programmatic relevance
- Develop complex investment strategies for biomedical research that deliver results
- Facilitate the collaboration between industry, academic, and government partners
- Improve the efficiency of operations through standardized policies and procedures
- Oversee research budgets to be fiscally compliant, and
- Manage biomedical research awards for technical merit, programmatic relevance, and deliverables

Mental and Behavioral Health Strategies:

Knowesis takes a multidisciplinary approach to develop, implement, and evaluate preventative, restorative, and resiliency techniques, tools, and therapeutics to enhance resiliency and recovery. Our teams are comprised of researchers, statisticians, epidemiologists, technologists, medical writers, trainers, and health promotions experts, to provide cradle-to-grave mental and behavioral health strategies.

Public Health Programs:

Our team of specialized scientists support public health through studies on occupational and environmental health and disease prevention practices. We assist our clients to anticipate, recognize and evaluate threats to human health and develop appropriate control and mitigation strategies.

Our support services include:

- Clinical Public Health & Epidemiology
- Environmental Health Sciences and Engineering
- Health Promotion & Wellness
- Laboratory Sciences
- Occupational Health Sciences
- Public Health Communications; and
- Toxicology

Our experts develop and disseminate standardized, evidence-based health promotion and wellness programs and tools, and develop metrics to measure program impact and effectiveness.

Biomedical Research and Regulatory Support:

Our biomedical research teams, backed up by regulatory specialists, support all phases of research. We work with our clients to facilitate approvals for your research projects and ensure compliance with animal and human subjects protections as well as FDA regulations. Our Regulatory Affairs experts are fluent with the Federal regulatory assurances and approvals required for both clinical and pre-clinical research.

Our experts can help navigate through all FDA requirements. We specialize in Data Sharing Agreements, interdepartmental Memorandums of Agreement and all aspects of information management. Resources such as HIPAA compliance, scientific misconduct investigations, scientific publication policies, clinicaltrials.gov guidance, CITI training instructions, and travel, and study participant information are available, to stay ahead of evolving regulatory requirements as studies progress.
